Step Lightly on Beauty's Path

By HELEN FOLLETT

FEW WOMEN walk beautifully. What's that old quotation? -- "She walks in beauty like the night." Paste it on your looking glass. Mind your steps. Stepping pretty is looking pretty.

Girls who hobble along on spiked heels can't make a graceful job of locomotion. Those with twinging toes, caused by ill-fitting shoes, appear to be walking on eggs. If the foot is bound, it cannot move naturally and easily, and many a shoe presses one place or another. Why won't the vimmin give the shoe question more attention? Echo doesn't answer because echo doesn't Some women scuttle along in a hurry, shoulders thrown forward, chest flat, a habit which in time will give them ugly figures. Others lope, taking long strides which are bound to make one appear awkard. Then there are sissies who mince along, taking tiny steps. Just toddlers; that's what they are.

The correct way is to carry the weight on the heel and the ball of the foot, to step with lightness. Keep the head well balanced, chest high, hips tucked back and under, tummer flat. Let the arms swing easily. March!

Use cold water freely on your complexion; it is a first class astringent, will act as a guarantee against enlarged pores that are complexion enemy number 1.
